

Jay Guy

Moving from Kannapolis, NC, Jay Guy joined the team last year as the newly appointed crew chief.

Guy elaborates on what inspired him to make the move to Denver. "This team intrigues me. It's not a start up, however we're still clawing our way into the Cup series. Although the team is not in the top 35 in points currently, I feel the program has a lot of assets, and all of the tools required for success. Now we need to implement them. In addition, I love to snow ski and now I'm an hour from some of the best skiing in the world. There is something to be said about the quality of life here."

Guy's prior stint was with the #47 Clorox/American Red Cross Ford Fusion Busch team in 2006 after starting the year with his '05 driver Jon Wood in the NASCAR Busch Series.

Guy spent the '04 season with Fitz-Bradshaw Racing as the crew chief for drivers Casey Atwood, Dave Blaney and David Stremme. He also had a short stint with Xpress Motorsports and No. 19 team with driver Regan Smith. Guy joined ST Motorsports in January '05.

Late in the '03 season, Guy stepped up with his No. 10 Winston Cup team to serve as crew chief for driver Johnny Benson.

Guy has also worked with Jamie McMurray, David Green, Hermie Sadler and Ted Musgrave in the Busch Series and NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series.

Guy's inspiration and racing role model is owner and driver Dave Marcis. He is currently 34 and single. Guy enjoys skiing, golf, and football in his down time.
